Some of the friends of Director Sousa feel rather aggrieved that the American bandmaster, who came to Paris from Germany, expressly to be present and give his services to the commission on the occasion of the dedication of the statue of Lafayette, was not thanked before leaving the French capital. He called at Frogerais's residence and was received with open arms. The cousin was invited, instead of going to a hotel, to stay at the actor's prettily furnished flat in the Rue de

All went well for a few days, but one evening the youth, rushing to the door leading to the stairs, shouted that he had accidentally knocked over a lamp. The place was on fire.

Poor Return for Kindness. When M. Frogerais returned home he ound his rooms occupied by firemen. He noticed also that the sum of 260 francs was missing, and he discovered that in his wardrobe all the drawers had been opened, The janitor stated that this looting had occurred before the arrival of the fire brigade, and suspicion at once fell upon the cousin, who is only 18 years old.

He was found the same evening at a well-known restaurant in the company of a demi-mondaine. He confessed to having stolen the money and to having set fire to the apartment. He acknowledged that he had had "a rare good time," and said he had promised to take his fair companion in marriage. The case came before the courts yesterday. Despite medical testimony to the effect that the youth was not altogether re-sponsible for his actions, he was condemned to serve one year in prison, Royalty Plays the Ruces.

GOSSIP FROM THE

LITERARY WORLD.

Writing from London about the ever-present interest in the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam, Mr. W. L. Alden says in the New York Times: "Possibly because of the extreme heat, the Omar Khayyam discussion continues in a languid sort of way. Some one has just demonstrated to his own satisfaction that the Rubalyat was not written until 400 years after Omar's death, and that, although it is in substance a Persian poem, it is not entitled to be called the work of Omar Khayyam. Some one else insists that there never was any such person as Omar, and that the Rubaiyat is purely the work of Fitzgerald. On the other hand are those who hold that Fitzgerald was utterly incapable of writing the Rubalyat, and that its real author was some one who has not yet been named. If the weather were cooler we should probably have a series of quarrels growing out of this dispute, but in the present state of the thermometer no one an afford to run the risk of apoplexy which a heated quarrel would entail. "For my own part, I am of the opinion that the Rubalyat was written by Lord Bacon in the intervals between his other literary labors," continues Mr. Alden in facetious veln. "He may have written a Shakespeare play in the morning, a philo-sophical treatise in the afternoon, a play of Ben Jonson's or Marlowe's in the early evening, and a few dozen quatrains of the Rubaiyat at night. Lord Bacon was, of course, a busy and hard-working man, or he never could have accomplished so much, but then again a man who was capable of writing all the plays attributed to Shapespeare, Johnson and Marlowe, besides his other works, would surely have been able o knock off such a little thing as the Rubaiyat at odd moments.

A new volume of short stories from the pen of Frank R. Stockton is being prepared for early publication by Charles Scribner's Sons, It will be entitled "Afield and Afloat," and will be the first volume of brief fiction that Mr. Stockton has published since "A Story-Teller's Pack," issued about three years ago. It will contain a selection from the stories written during this time, and will make a full and varied volume in the author's perhaps most popular field.

Lilian Bell's new novel, "The Expatriates," which is now in active preparation at Har-per & Brothers', is written upon entirely different lines from those followed by this author's former work, "Love Affairs of an Old Maid" and "As Seen by Me." In fact, it may be said to be Miss Bell's first genuin The scene of the tale opens with the fire in the Bazaar de la Charite, in Pars, and then shifts to America-to Arizona, to Chicago, to New York. It is said that much-traveled persons will recognize the scenery in the various cities with which issued in a one-volume edition by the Mac-milian Company, with illustrations by Hugh Thompson.

"A Kentucky Cardinal" and "Aftermath,"

The reading public will be glad to hear that "Hugh Wynne" is at last to appear in a single volume. The first and all subsequent editions, including the lavishly illus-trated Continental Edition, issued by The Century Company last year, were in two Volumes. The work will hereafter contain twelve half-tone reproductions of Howard Pyle's brilliant drawings. A new cover has been designed for the book. The one-vol-ume edition now printing brings "Hugh Wynne" into its eighty-eighth thousand.

was brought out in this country by Charles Scribner's Sons under the title of "The Touchstone," gives an interesting account of the difficulties which were encountered in naming it. It seems that while it was passing through Mr. Murray's press with the American title attached, the publisher discovered that there was already a novel by that name in British circulation. He therefore decided to change the title and wrote at once to Mrs. Wharton, who was then traveling in Italy, asking her permis-sion to call her book "The Touch of a Van-ished Hand." After a month a reply came by telegraph, asking him to adopt another title which unfortunately had also been forestalled, "Meanwhile," says Mr. Murray, "the sheets had all been printed off when I was informed that a novel was published in 1889 called 'The Touch of a Vangave me no address, and as a decision had to be made without further delay, I have ventured to give the book the title which it now bears-'A Gift From the Grave'and I hope that no other claimant will now Although this portion of the book can hardly be said to have been neglected by reviewers, the opening chapter of Mr. James Lane Allen's "The Reign of Law" does not seem to have attracted quite the special attention it deserves. It is one of the strongest, most nearly perfect bits of poetical prose ever written. Had Mr. Allen done nothing else this would certainly have entitled him to a high place in the estimation of the most critical portion of the public. Indeed, such is the charm of this chapter, this idyll of hemp, that more than one reader has already expressed a desire to have it republished in separate form, with its accompanying illustrations, which for once really thoroughly accord with the spirit of the poem, as this chapter may well be called. As is so often the case with Mr. Allen's best work, his words are so carefully chosen, his artistry so perfect, and his sentences and paragraphs so thoroughly corelated, that the charm of the whole cannot be adequately shown in quotation. Suffice it to say that each new tending of this strongest of all introductions, which consists of only about twenty pages, reveals new beauties and fresher charms in all directions. It would only be recessary to glance over this portion of Lambre, the actor giving him at the same Mr. Allen's book to win for it many read-time a doorkey.

Mr. Allen's book to win for it many read-ers, even were it the work of a new writer and not that of a man from whom we have learned to expect the most finished work. The name of the English edition of this novel is said to be "The Increasing Purpose"—("Yet I doubt not through the ages one increasing purpose runs")-which would in any case be a much more satisfactory title than "The Reisn of Law," and one which would seem to better indicate the scope of the story. The book has been widely read, having gone into several edi-

Lately I have had occasion to read several books written by persons whose names gave no indication of sex, writes Mr. W. L. Alden in the New York Times. What is a man to do when writing notices of such books? Is he to credit them arbitrarily to men or women, just as the fancy may take him, or is he to speak of the author, when-ever he has occasion to mention him or her, as "Mr. or Mrs. or Miss" So and So? The question was lately referred to a critte who is generally thought to be a cynic, though, in point of fact, he is one of the

"What do you do when you find a book written by some one who apparently has no sex?" he was asked. was the reply, "the book is a stily one, I speak of the author as a woman. If it is merely stupid, I assume that he is a man."

"And what do you do if it is a clever book?" continued the questioner.
"Then I shirk the matter of the writer's sex altogether and hint that, while I know whether the author is a man or a woman, I respect his or her wishes by refusing to reveal the secret."

I hardly think that this plan of procedure is a thoroughly good one. Certainly it is not a safe rule to assume that if a book is silly it is necessarily wratten by a woman. In silliness, as in many other things, a man can far surpass a woman,

John Fox, Jr., the Kentucky novelist, is an ardent fisherman, and he will describe in the September Scribner's an amusing fishing trip which he made in the Kentucky mountains.

The author of "The Workers," Walter A. Wyckoff, has published nothing since the appearance of those two remarkable volumes. In the September Scribner's he will reappear as a writer with an account of his tourney to the Far North with one of the Peary relief expeditions. He will tell particularly of his observations of the strange race of Eskimos, known as the Arctic Highlanders. The articles contain much valuable observations and are besides, amusing and entertaining on their adventurous side.

The editor of the Century is receiving inquiries about the author of "The Helmet of Navarre," the historical romance which began to appear serially in the August num-ber of that magazine. Miss Bertha Runkle is the only child of Mrs. L. G. Runkle, a well-known New York journalist, and one of the editors of the "Library of the World's Best Literature." The present work is a maiden effort at fiction writing. She was born in New Jersey a few and twenty years ago, never went to kindergarten as a child, nor to college as a young woman, has traveled little, and has never been in France-which possibly accounts for her laying there the scene of her romance.

The increased attention given Italian life in America, caused by the tragic fate of King Humbert, has resulted in a still larger interest in Mr. H. W. Thomas's "The Last Lady of Mulberry," which is already accepted as the classic where Italy in New York is concerned. It so happens that the author of this picturesque romance had a very pleasant interview with King Humbert a few years since, and some of the King's inquiries regarding the Italians in this country led to the first suggestion of "The Last Lady of Mulberry."

"A Private Chivalry" is the title of the new novel by Francis Lynde, which Messrs. D. Appleton & Co. announce for early publication. The scene, which is laid in Colorado shifts from the stirring life of a min-ing camp to Denver, and the story is said to be remarkable for dramatic actions and suspended interest.

The Reverend Doctor D. Z. Sheffleld, president of the North China College and Mission at Tung-Chau, near Pekin, was in America when the Boxer riots began, but immediately prepared to return to his post. Before sailing from San Francisco, late in June, he learned of the burning of his college. Doctor Sheffield left behind him the manuscript of an article which will appear in the September Century under the title of "The Influence of the Western World on China." As a result of the author's thirty years' experience as a missionary, he is said to argue strongly against the dismemberment of the Middle Kingdom. Equally timely will be a paper by R. Van Bergen in the same number, on "The Revolution in China and Its Causes." The fiction of the September magazine will include a characteristic story of about 20,000 words by John Luther Long-"The Prince of Illusion."

Jefferson Club Element Holds That the Action Is Illegal-Headquarters of the Committee Downtown Hereafter.

The Democratic City Central Committee had a stormy session at the Jefferson Club last night, its last meeting at that place as it is proposed in the future to meet at No. 110 North Eighth street, where the committee has secured headquarters.

At the meeting last night, in furtherance of a scheme to reorganize the committee, engineered by Charles Lemp of the Ninth Ward, French Nelson, member of the committee from the Twenty-second Ward, was ousted. The Jefferson Club faction, headed by Chairman Barney Taaife, holds that the action unseating Nelson is illegal because the vote by which he was thrown out was not a majority of the entire committee. The matter of reorganization of the Democratic City Committee has been under way for several weeks, although nothing concerning it has been permitted to leak out. Mr. Lemp, who is somewhat am-bitious politically, has worked quietly with the assistance of his fellow-members on the committee.

The first act of the combination was transferring the headquarters of the com-mittee from the Jefferson Club building to a dewntown location. This was accomplished with some opposition. Lemp, assisted by Thomas E. Barrett and several others, then went to work in an attempt to elect a new chairman and secretary favorable to his interests.

"To secure control of the committee beyond the peradventure of a doubt, the plan to the peranventure of a doubt, the plan to declare French Nelson's seat vacant was proposed. The matter came up when a member of the Lemp faction moved that Nelson be dropped from the committee because of his absence at three consecutive meetings. This provoked some discussion. Chairman Taaffe put the motion and it was adopted by a vote of 14 to 7.

Members Left the Meeting. Chairman Tanffe ruled that the mo-tion was lost, on the ground that it took a majority of all members to declare a va-cancy. An appeal from the decision of the chair was taken.

On a vote the chair was not sustained by a vote of 13 to 8. No further action was taken.

Several members of the Jefferson Club fac-tion, headed by Ben Clark and W. J. Flynn, left the meeting. With that the entire committee departed without declarentire committee departed without declaring an adjournment.

The Lemp faction apparently had prepared to spring the matter at the meeting ast night. Its entire vote was out while the Jefferson Club faction was represented only by Frank Ahern, Ben Clark, Geo.ge Friday, John Sartorius, John F. Hines, Thomas Quinn and William J. Flynn.

The action was based on a precedent established some time ago, when David Carton of the Twenty-seventh Ward was removed on a similar charge, and John Lingner substituted. Carton was recognized as an anti-Jefferson Club member of the committee. After the meeting last night the members of the Lemp faction met out on the sidewalk in front of tha club, where they were joined by Tom Barrett.

Both Chairman Taaffe of the committee and President Hawes declare that the action of the Lemp faction was illegal and that or the Lemp faction was filegal and that the Carten case was not similar. They hold that Carten was ousted from the committee by a majority of members of the entire committee and that Nelson was not, consequently he is still a member notwich-standing the action taken last night. Mr. Hawes said:

"We are now acquainted with the game the gentlemen desire to play. If they think they can reorganize the committee, let them try it. We had one tussle with them at the last primary and we can give them another if that is what they want."

He was positive that the law regulating the City Committee required a vote of a majority of the entire committee to declare a vacancy.

What the outcome may be is hard to conjecture. With a full attendance of the committee the question of a reorganization might still be in doubt, although the Lemp followers declare they have a majority of District. Henry C. Bell, chairman of the Congressional Committee of the Thirteenth District, arrived last night from De Soto, where the committee met yesterday to cast up the returns from the primaries held in the district to nominate a Congressman. From the re-sult as figured by the committee, Congress-man Edward Robb was nominated over Jas-per W. Burks by a majority of 4,875. The vote by counties was as follows:

Chadwell, Ste. Genevleve; Shannon, W. A. Ramsey, Bartlett; Texas, George W. Pettigrew, Cabool; Washington, H. C. Beil, Potosi; Wayne, L. W. Cotton, Pledmont; Webster, A. J. McDowell, Marshfield; Wright, Ed Mansen, Mountain Grove.

J. Frank Merryman of the Twenty-eighth Ward and Patrick O'Malley, also of the Twenty-eighth Ward, candidates for the congressional nomination, appeared before the committee and formally presented their claims to consideration as candidates, Mr. Merryman produced letters which he had received from Given Campbell, George W. Lubke and J. E. McKeighan, who had been mentioned as prospective candidates, in which each declared that he was not a candidate for the office.

Charles Kelly and John Hunt; who have also been spoken of as candidates, were not present. Although last night was set as the limit of time in which candidates could present their names in order to obtain official recognition by the committee, it is understood that Kelly and Hunt are still in the race, and may file delegations with the Election Commissioners later. Kelly is said to be confined to his home by illness.

No date was set for the holding of the primarles last night, as the committee has not yet secured a hall in which to hold the convention. A committee, consisting of Henry Morsman, William Haney and John Durning, was appointed to make arrangements for a suitable hall and report to a meeting to be held next Friday. At that meeting the date for the primarles will be amounced.
